Natasha David-Walker is House of David

House of David Inc., is a Professional Writing and Consulting Business with writers specializing in science and health writing, grant writing, and creative writing. Our visionary and Executive Editor Natasha, has in her career been employed as a Director of Public Relations and HIV Coordinator in the nonprofit arena; a Health Educator contracting with the Memphis District School System/CDC; and in private Consulting as a Professional Writer. Areas of writing expertise include: scientific writing, creative writing, grant writing, business writing, proposals & RFP's, book editing, ghost writing, political speech writing, campaign slogans, radio ads and taglines, and nonprofit writing and development.

Who is Natasha David-Walker?

Natasha David-Walker is a native of Atlanta who returns to Georgia after studying at Oakwood College and Columbus State University, where she earned a B.S. Degree in General Studies in Biology; and the University of Memphis (U of M), where she earned a Masters in English/Professional Writing. While studying at the U of M, Natasha was hired by a non-profit community-based organization, the South Memphis Alliance (SMA) as both the Director of Public Relations and HIV Coordinator. During her tenure and in her work as HIV Coordinator, Natasha was privileged to work as a liaison for the community. As a result, she gained experience as a community organizer and activist from a grass-roots perspective.
